Social Security Wage Base Set to Increase for 2007

As the designated liaison between the Social Security Administration and employers with Social Security Section 218 Agreements, the Department of Employee Trust Funds provides the following updated information, including Social Security and Medicare wage bases for 2007. This information applies to all Wisconsin Retirement System employers and all other public employers subject to a Social Security Section 218 agreement.

• Social Security and Medicare Wage Bases and Rates for 2007

Effective for all wages paid on or after January 1, 2007, the Social Security (full FICA) wage base will increase from $94,200 to $97,500. The Medicare wage base will not have a dollar limit for 2007.

Although the wage base will increase, the employer and employee tax rates will remain the same in 2007. The Social Security (full FICA) rate remains at 7.65% (6.20% Social Security plus 1.45% Medicare) for wages up to $97,500. All wages over $97,500 are subject only to the 1.45% Medicare rate. The rate remains at 1.45% for others who are subject only to Medicare.

• Retirement Earnings Test for 2007

The retirement earnings test applies only to people below normal retirement age (NRA), which ranges from age 65 to 67, depending on year of birth. Social Security withholds benefits if one’s earnings exceed a certain level—called a retirement earnings test exempt amount—and one is below NRA. One of two different exempt amounts apply depending on the year one attains NRA. These exempt amounts generally increase annually with increases in the national average wage index.

The Social Security Administration determines the exempt amount using procedures defined in the Social Security Act. For people attaining NRA after 2007, the annual exempt amount in 2007 is $12,960. For people attaining NRA in 2007, the annual exempt amount is $34,440. This higher exempt amount applies only to earnings made in months prior to the month of NRA attainment. • 2007 Earnings Requirement for One-Quarter Credit for Social Security

In 2007, the amount of earnings required for a Social Security credit (one quarter of coverage) will increase from $970 to $1,000 ($2,000 will earn two quarters, etc.).

• 2007 Benefit Increase for Social Security

The Social Security benefit increase for 2007 will be 3.3%.

• Election Worker Exclusion for 2007

The earnings exclusion for election workers will remain the same at $1,300 for 2007.

Reminder: Law Regarding Employees Not Covered by Social Security

Section 419(c) of Public Law 108-203, the Social Security Protection Act of 2004, requires state and local government employers to disclose the effect of the Windfall Elimination Provision and the Government Pension Offset to employees hired on or after January 1, 2005, in jobs not covered by Social Security. The law requires newly-hired public employees to sign a statement that they are aware of a possible reduction in their future Social Security benefit entitlement. For more detailed information about this law and to view a copy of the statement concerning employment in a job not covered by Social Security (Form SSA-1945), go to the following link: http://www.socialsecurity.gov/form1945.
